

The Idea Guidebook

Every idea is a journey of possibilities. #ImagineThat

From the earliest days of humanity, imagination has inspired change.

Inventions born out of imagination have transformed the world, solving problems big and small, making life easier, healthier, and more connected.

The greatest inventions have one thing in common: none of them arrived fully formed. Each began as a spark, just a hint of what could be.

We believe an idea can start anywhere, and with the right steps, it can lead to real impact.

The Idea Guidebook will show you how to take that journey.

How does an idea take shape?

Imagine the thread of a thought floating through your mind.

You follow it. Watch as it picks up fragments of inspiration, evolving and weaving something bigger, better, more inspiring.

The world needs your ideas

Given the right tools and resources, everyone has the potential to nurture and hone a good idea.

The Idea Guidebook will show you how to harness your thoughts and refine them into an idea that has real impact.

Time to put on your thinking caps.

STEP 01

Narrow your focus

Here are some broad pointers to help you get started:

Change how people do everyday things

Bring innovations or improvements in how people work, travel, buy things, move around, socialise and more.

Inspire new ways of thinking

Transform how people perceive different things — from social and business issues to sustainability and mental health awareness, the list is endless.

Advocate for policies that help the marginalised

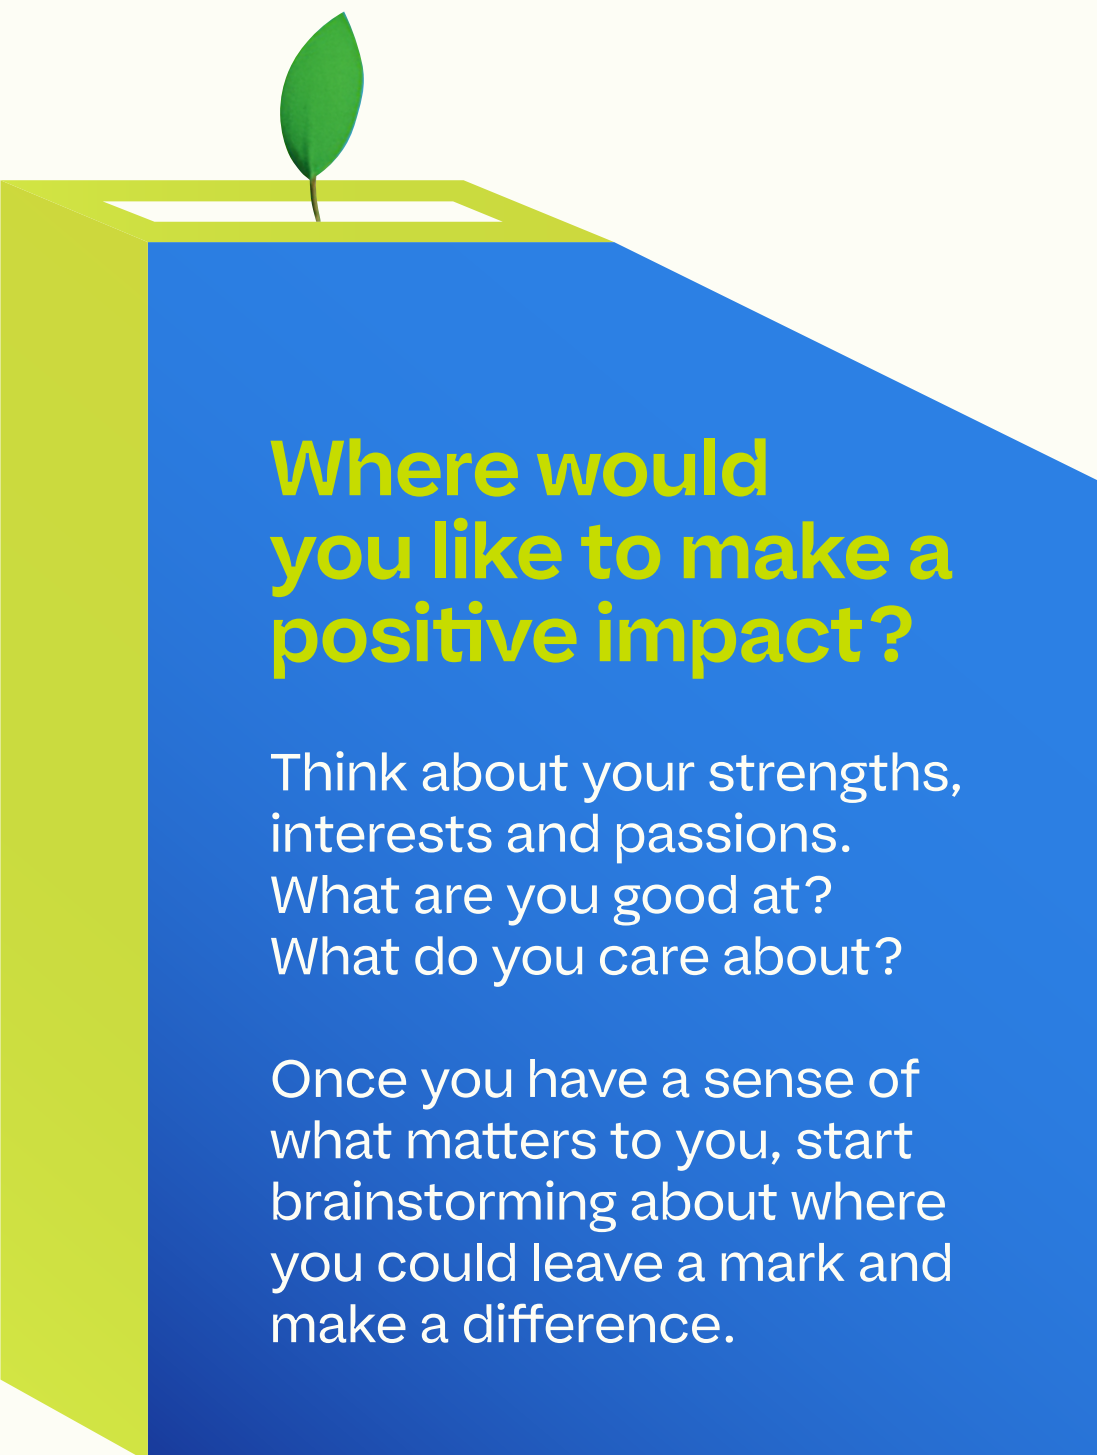

Imagine new ways to ensure jobs, quality education, financial inclusion, accessible healthcare and more.

Take action to protect the environment

Show your commitment to sustainability or develop models that safeguard our flora and fauna. Unless we act now, the future won't be as bright.

Help businesses work better

Create new business avenues, find ways to boost operational efficiency, or help organisations have a positive impact on a small community, a market or even the world.

Where would you like to make a positive impact?

Think about your strengths, interests and passions.
What are you good at?
What do you care about?

Once you have a sense of what matters to you, start brainstorming about where you could leave a mark and make a difference.

STEP 02

Find your problem & its solution

Here are five steps to help you get started:

Find a problem worth solving

Talk to people and do the research. The goal is to find a human need that must be met or a pain point that needs to be solved.

Delve into the problem

Once you zero in on a problem, start analysing it. Knowing the problem inside out will help you find a solution.

Do people want your solution?

This answer matters. To build a business around your idea, you will need to identify a demand. People always want something — figure that out.

Ideate, ideate, ideate

Once you have all the information, start ideating solutions. It pays to think of multiple options and narrow them down to the best one.

Keep it fresh and original

Lastly, remember to cross-check against what's out there. Make sure the solutions you are suggesting don't already exist.

What problem would you choose and how would you go about finding a solution for it?

STEP 03

Test your idea

Is your idea worth pursuing?

Not all ideas are created equal. Some are worth your time and effort, while others are not. But you won't know for sure till you put that idea through its paces.

Time to see if your idea has legs.

Check if it works on paper

Write down a problem scenario and then imagine how your solution would help. List out all the possible outcomes. Repeat this with different scenarios until you have plenty of outcomes. Keep all the data handy for later.

Talk to people and get their opinions

An outside perspective is always useful because people who aren't invested in your idea may point out things that you miss. They may also offer suggestions for improvement. Remember, only discuss your ideas with people you trust.

Does your idea work in the real world?

If you have the means to do so, create a rough prototype of your idea and put it to test. This will help you determine if your idea works in the real world. The exercise may also help you smooth out the kinks and fine-tune the details.

Get specific about your idea

You've tested out the idea, collected enough data, reviewed the results, and you're beginning to feel confident. That means it's time to define your idea: What is it? Why is it necessary? How does it work?

STEP 04

Your idea checklist

Let's do a quick check to make sure your idea is a winner.

- Is your idea innovative and original?
- Is your idea clearly defined and easy to understand?
- Does your idea solve a real problem?
- Have you done research and analysis before arriving at the solution?
- Can you explain the benefits of your idea?
- Can you answer potential objections to your idea?
- Can the idea be executed well if you are given the proper resources?
- Will your idea have a positive impact?
- Is your idea profitable and is there a market for it?

STEP 05

Prepare your pitch

Here's how to pitch with confidence and convince the panel that your idea is ready for the real world:

➤ Break it down:

Why, what and how

Talk about why your solution or idea is necessary and how it will benefit people. Offer a summary of your idea and explain how it works.

➤ Create a short video pitch

Keep it under two minutes & highlight the salient features of your idea. Remember to look directly at the camera and speak with confidence.

➤ Let the data do the talking

Talk about why your solution or idea is necessary and how it will benefit people. Offer a summary of your idea and explain how it works.

➤ Be ready for questions

If someone is interested in your idea, they will ask a lot of questions. This is a good thing. Make sure to do your research and prepare for all kinds of questions.

➤ Keep things clear and concise

Unless the concept requires an in-depth explanation, keep your statements brief and to the point. You can always go into detail when they buy into your idea.
